According to the CCSS Language Standard 2, students at almost all levels must learn to capitalize. Don't worry though. It's pretty simple to teach students how to capitalize if you know the way. I'm going to show you the way, and then you can use my collection of worksheets, lessons and tests to help your students master capitalization. I made a table of materials for this page. It's underneath. If you already know how to teach capitalization, click on the table of materials below to jump in advance. If not, I suggest you go through this page from top to bottom. I organized it this way for you. Capitalization Activities and Resources How to teach capitalization first, teach your students about appropriate names. Don't give them a list of 800 appropriate types of names to capitalize on. Just teach them what an appropriate name is and tell them that the appropriate names are always capitalized. Second, teach students that we capitalize on the securities. These may be book titles or films as well as professional titles. However, there are a few words in the securities that we do not capitalize on. If you have younger students, explain to them that we do not capitalize on little words as and in. If your students are more developed, tell them that we do not capitalize on articles and prepositions in titles. Finally, remind them that we capitalize on the first word each sentence and pronoun I. They probably already know that, but this is the third case where we capitalize on words. Now that you know the plan, it's time to prepare your materials. You may be interested in using the PowerPoint lesson I created on capitalization if you have a projector. After you teach them how to capitalize, give them some homework or courses on capitalization.
